Another Patent Eligible Software Invention

In Trading Technologies International, Inc. v. CQG, Inc. (“TTI”), the Federal Circuit found claims for a graphical user interface (“GUI”) to be patent eligible subject matter under 35 U.S.C. § 101. This case is another example of how software may be patent eligible. To read the article that discusses this case, click here.

Derek Fahey is a patent attorney at The Plus IP Firm.
The Plus IP Firm helps businesses and inventors protect their ideas, concepts and creations with patents, trademarks and copyrights.

"My experience with the Plus IP Firm began with a simple communication about trademarking my company name/design with Jill. She was able to provide me with essential information that allowed me to properly evaluate my decision to move forward. I did have some very detailed questions, so she had Derek reach out to me personally. He was very professional and his industry knowledge gave me confidence in their team. I decided to move forward with the trademarking of my design. I was most impressed with their communication and how quickly they moved my process along. I dealt with some other firms prior to contacting the Plus IP Firm and they were not able to earn my trust for a variety of reasons. I would recommend using Jill and Derek for any of the services they provide, and I'm hoping to bring them more business of my own in the near future." - Steven, a loyal and satisfied client.
